

CHARLOTTETOWN HOME PRICES REMAIN RELATIVELY FLAT IN THE FIRST QUARTER OF 2015

Prices remain attractive leading into spring market

CHARLOTTETOWN, April 15, 2015 – The Royal LePage House Price Survey released today showed stable prices for all housing types surveyed in Charlottetown.

The average prices of standard two-storey homes and detached bungalows increased marginally on a year-over-year basis, rising 1.0 per cent and 0.6 per cent to $207,000 and $174,000, respectively. The average price for standard condominiums remained flat at $130,000.

“Housing sales in January started off well but activity was dampened by the inclement weather we experienced in February and March,” said Ken Peters, broker and owner of Royal LePage Peters and Lank Realtor Inc. “The number of homes that changed hands this quarter is down approximately 30 per cent compared to the same period last year, and the number of homes listed on the market is down by a similar amount.”

“Despite the slow start to the year, mortgage rates remain at record lows and spring is right around the corner. We expect market activity will pick up quite nicely in the coming months,” Peters continued.

Nationally, Canada’s real estate market is experiencing a soft landing, characterized by slower than normal home price increases. Much higher price increases were observed in the country’s two largest urban markets, which combined to send the national average values upwards, partially obscuring the broader national trend.

During the quarter, the average price of a home in Canada rose between 3.8 per cent and 6.6 per cent year-over-year in the first quarter. When broken out by housing type, the survey showed a year-over-year average price increase of 5.3 per cent to $451,463 for standard two-storey homes, while detached bungalows rose 6.6 per cent to $405,895. During the same period, the average price of standard condominiums climbed 3.8 per cent to $261,782.

The steady softening of prices in most markets across the country was first observed in the mid-year 2014 Royal LePage House Price Survey. In recent months, two unanticipated factors disrupted the natural housing price cycle: the steep decline in oil prices late in 2014 and the Bank of Canada’s subsequent reaction in lowering the overnight rate early in 2015.

“Canadian home buyers, with the last decade’s recession still top of mind, have been very sensitive to shifting, broad economic factors. The oil shock has been unsettling for the national economy, consumer confidence and by extension, the housing market,” said Phil Soper, president and chief executive, Royal LePage. “That said, lower prices at the pump and the confidence boosting move by the central bank to lower interest rates have been supportive. With these factors combined, we have a soft-landing for housing after several years of robust expansion. We define a soft-landing as a market in which home prices are flat or increasing slightly, giving the economy and family incomes, a chance to catch up.”

“On balance, we believe we will not be seeing the kind of appreciation observed over the last three years any time soon, as markets work through the current cycle and align with broader economic conditions,” continued Soper. “In terms of downside risk, we do not foresee a sharp decline in home prices, particularly in today’s low interest rate environment.”

About the Royal LePage House Price Survey

The Royal LePage House Price Survey is the largest, most comprehensive study of its kind in Canada, with information on seven types of housing in over 250 neighbourhoods from coast to coast. This release references an abbreviated version of the survey which highlights house price trends for the three most common types of housing in Canada in 90 communities across the country. A complete database of past and present surveys is available on the Royal LePage website at www.royallepage.ca. Current figures will be updated following the complete tabulation of the data for the first quarter of 2015. A printable version of the first quarter 2015 survey will be available online on May 15, 2015. Housing values in the Royal LePage House Price Survey are Royal LePage opinions of fair market value in each location, based on local data and market knowledge provided by Royal LePage residential real estate experts.
