

MONCTON HOUSING MARKET POSTS SMALL PRICE DECLINES IN SECOND QUARTER

Strong unit sales growth offsets lower average prices for area homes

Moncton, July 14, 2015 – The Royal LePage House Price Survey and Market Survey Forecast released today showed moderate price softness among housing types surveyed in Moncton.

Detached bungalows and standard two-storey homes both declined in average price in the second quarter, dropping 1.1 per cent to $148,000 and 1.5 per cent to $150,000, respectively.

“Despite the price softness, Moncton has been a busy real estate market, with unit sales up almost 10 per cent so far this year,” said Carla Bouchard, Manager, Royal LePage Atlantic.

According to Bouchard, the region faces economic challenges including a tough labour market and limited migration. However, there are expectations that the situation may improve in coming years as new ship building contracts are signed and unconventional oil deposits in the area are developed.

Looking ahead, Bouchard forecasts the continuation of a stable housing market for the remainder of the year. “Home prices are likely to continue to remain largely consistent with last year. Some new two-storey builds may help push average prices for this category up, but for the most part we expect things to remain steady,” noted Bouchard.

Nationally, against the backdrop of mixed economic signals at home and abroad, Canada’s real estate market remained healthy in the second quarter of 2015, with solid national average price appreciation across housing segments. Furthermore, the combination of high sales volumes and vigorous price appreciation in Canada’s largest cities has put the national residential real estate market on track for a record year in terms of total sales. With most Canadian real estate markets across the country advancing modestly, and some rapidly, Royal LePage advises that a further interest rate cut by the Bank of Canada could over-stimulate markets such as greater Toronto and Vancouver.

During the second quarter, the average price of a home in Canada rose between 3.9 per cent and 7.5 per cent year-over-year in the second quarter. The detached bungalow segment had the highest national increase, rising 7.5 per cent year-over-year to $438,938, while standard two-storey homes appreciated 6.8 per cent to $471,002. During the same period, the average price of a condominium rose 3.9 per cent to $268,583. Looking ahead, Royal LePage forecasts that the average price of a home in Canada will increase 6.1 per cent for the full year when compared to 2014.

“The robust national average home price increases that we have seen in the second quarter are heavily influenced by activity levels in Toronto and Vancouver,” said Phil Soper, president and chief executive officer, Royal LePage. “Looking to Canada as a whole, 2015 is shaping up to be a record year for housing, despite the cloud of economic uncertainty caused by low oil prices and twitchy global economies.”

About the Royal LePage House Price Survey

The Royal LePage House Price Survey is the largest, most comprehensive study of its kind in Canada, with information on seven types of housing in over 250 neighbourhoods from coast to coast. This release references an abbreviated version of the survey which highlights house price trends for the three most common types of housing in Canada in 90 communities across the country. A complete database of past and present surveys is available on the Royal LePage website at www.royallepage.ca. Current figures will be updated following the complete tabulation of the data for the second quarter of 2015. A printable version of the second quarter 2015 survey will be available online on August 14, 2015. Housing values in the Royal LePage House Price Survey are Royal LePage opinions of fair market value in each location, based on local data and market knowledge provided by Royal LePage residential real estate experts.
