

Saskatoon Sees Modest Decrease in Home Prices in First Quarter of 2018

New mortgage rules and appealing rentals softened demand for real estate

SASKATOON, April 13, 2018 – According to the Royal LePage House Price Survey¹ released today, the aggregate price of a home in Saskatoon decreased slightly in the first quarter of 2018 by 1.0 per cent year-over-year to $376,111.

When broken out by housing type, the median price of a two-storey home increased 0.4 per cent year-over-year to $408,680, while the median price of a bungalow decreased 2.8 per cent to $338,882.

“Overall, home sales and prices decreased in the first part of the year, which appears to be the result of a push forward in sales in late 2017 before the new mortgage rules came into effect,” said Norm Fisher, broker and owner, Royal LePage Vidorra. “While activity has slowed, housing supply is the lowest it’s been in over four years during this time of the year.”

Nationally, Canada’s residential real estate market saw slowing year-over-year increases in the first three months of 2018. On a quarter-over-quarter basis for the same period, home prices in many markets across the country remained relatively flat, with approximately half of the markets studied by Royal LePage posting slight declines.

“We are experiencing a broad-based, residential housing correction in Canada, triggered by federal and provincial intervention,” said Phil Soper, president and CEO, Royal LePage. “Strong house price gains in the first half of 2017 mask some of the recent market shifts when comparing year-over-year home value trends.”

“The combination of declining affordability and government intervention has for the most part neutralized very high home price appreciation levels in the greater Vancouver and Toronto regions, relative to the extreme heights witnessed in recent periods,” continued Soper. “However, the demand for housing is so strong that the rate of home price appreciation is expected to pick up again in the second half of 2018.”

The Royal LePage National House Price Composite, compiled from proprietary property data in 63 of the nation’s largest real estate markets, showed that the price of a home in Canada increased 6.2 per cent year-over-year to $605,512 in the first quarter of 2018. When broken out by housing type, the median price of a two-storey home rose 5.7 per cent year-over-year to $715,726, and the median price of a bungalow climbed 4.5 per cent to $501,985. Condominiums continued to witness the highest price appreciation rates among housing types studied, rising 10.3 per cent to $418,245.

“While we have recently seen both overshooting and corrections in Canada’s largest markets, on a national basis we believe the Canadian housing market is amidst a long-term expansionary cycle supported by strong economic fundamentals,” said Soper. “Canada’s stature is rising on a global scale. Our cities continue to be ranked among the most desired places to live in the world. Our economy is strong, our unemployment levels are the lowest they've been in four decades and we have one of the fastest-growing populations among advanced economies. These factors combined are incredibly supportive of long-term housing demand and valuations.”
