

Edmonton House Prices Modestly Decline as Market Moves toward Balance

First-time home buyer incentive expected to benefit Edmonton's Millennials

EDMONTON, July 10, 2019 – Home prices in Edmonton continued to show a modest decline, year-over-year, in the second quarter of 2019, decreasing 0.9 per cent to $371,106, according to the Royal LePage House Price Survey¹ released today.

Broken out by housing type, the median price of a two-storey home increased 0.3 per cent year-over-year to $428,662 and the median price of a bungalow decreased 1.3 per cent year-over-year to $368,156. In the same period, the median price of a condominium also decreased 6.4 per cent to $214,891.

“We’re coming out of a correction and working our way towards a more balanced market,” said Tom Shearer, broker and owner, Royal LePage Noralta Real Estate. “In the coming months we’ll see an adjustment, compared to the summer and fall of 2018.”

He added that the federal government’s first-time home buyer incentive may help some in Edmonton.

“For those who have been saving, it’s a great investment. Edmonton doesn’t have huge swings like other markets. It isn’t a roller coaster ride. Millennials and first-time home buyers can afford to buy a starter home versus buying a condo,” said Shearer.

Looking ahead to the end of the year, Royal LePage is forecasting the aggregate price of a home in Edmonton to decrease 3.0 per cent from year-end 2018.

The Royal LePage National House Price Composite, compiled from proprietary property data in 63 of the nation’s largest real estate markets, showed that the price of a home in Canada increased 1.1 per cent year-over-year to $621,696 in the second quarter of 2019. When broken out by housing type, the median price of a two-storey home rose 1.0 per cent year-over-year to $727,165, while the median price of a bungalow dipped 0.4 per cent year-over-year to $516,048. Condominiums remained the fastest growing housing type on a national basis, with its median price rising 3.8 per cent year-over-year to $452,451.

“We now have evidence of a sustained market recovery in the nation’s largest market, and signs of a price floor in other regions hit hard by the eighteen month-old housing correction,” said Phil

Soper, president and CEO, Royal LePage. “Only in the West do we see a significant number of home buyers remaining on the sidelines, depressing sales volumes and causing prices to sag. Buoyed by supportive economic conditions, many stubborn homeowners in B.C. and Alberta remain unwilling to let their precious real estate go for less than what they perceive as fair value, which has gone a long way to protecting existing home values.”

Royal LePage expects national home prices to see a modest uptick by the end of the year, rising 0.4 per cent compared to the end of 2018.
